

Trans Day of Visibility 2026 Statement from The Safe Schools Project

Today, March 31st, is International Transgender Day of Visibility.

Today, and every day, we celebrate trans resilience and joy, and we reaffirm our commitment to fight for the rights and dignity of our trans family.

To our Two Spirit, transgender, nonbinary, and gender-expansive community: you deserve joy, love, and celebration. You deserve safety, rest, and a future to look forward to. You deserve to be seen for who you are and who you want to be.

From the trans ancestors who've proven there has never been a world without us, to the trans elders that have shown time and time again that we get to grow up loved for who we are, and the trans youth about to use their new name and pronouns for the first time: we celebrate you!

And to our trans siblings who have not yet had the opportunity to feel safe and secure in expressing their identity or sharing who they are with us yet: you are not invisible. We see you and celebrate you, too.

If you are looking for community to celebrate with today, consider joining The Diversity Center and Lionel Cantú Center's A Sacred Witnessing: A Trans Day of Euphoria Event. You can also celebrate at home by participating in the Trans Rights Read-a-Thon and supporting one of our local bookstores or libraries. You can also reach out to us at The Safe Schools Project to learn more about our programs and volunteer opportunities to support our queer and trans youth.

We see how much more beautiful the world is with our trans family in it. We hope you see it, too.

In solidarity,

The Safe Schools Project
